Cover Crops in Smallholder Agriculture

Lessons from Latin America

Edited by Roberto Alvarez

Cover crops are, or have potential to be, an important component in complex, diverse, risk-prone and resource-poor farming situations. This book is about the use and dissemination of cover crops in different agroecosystems and features four case studies from countries in Latin America to illustrate the wider potential of cover crops as components of low external input agricultural (LEIA) systems.

Food Security in Sub-Saharan Africa

Edited by Jonathan Drelich

Food insecurity is no longer seen as an agricultural problem caused by food production failure at national level, but instead as a failure of livelihoods to guarantee access to sufficient food at household level. Food Security in Sub-Saharan Africa brings together critical food security issues and draws on a variety of disciplinary perspectives, from agricultural economics to nutrition, and features case studies from across the sub-continent.

Beating Hunger: The Chivi Experience

A community-based approach to food security in Zimbabwe

Kudza Murwira, Helen Woodwood, Sato M. Mubvumba

Beating Hunger: The Chivi Experience describes a ten-year participatory technology development project to promote food security among small-scale farmers in the drought-prone and arid communal lands of Zimbabwe. The aim of the project was to extend the range of soil- and water conserving farming techniques available to men and women, evaluating and disseminating these with traditional techniques to improve land returns.

Encouraging Diversity

The conservation and development of plant genetic resources

Edited by Alison Allwood

Encouraging Diversity examines the issue of crop conservation and development and looks at around 80 different cases to assess accumulated experience in plant genetic resources in both the South and the North. It presents a diverse and rich body of work from conservationists, breeders, seed producers and NGOs, and places them in the context of the latest approaches to local and global Plant Genetic Resource (PGR) management.
