

Civil Society, NGDOs and Social Development: Changing the Rules of the Game

by Alan Fowler

United Nations Research Institute for Social Development

Contents

Acronyms	ii
Summary/Résumé/Resumen	iv
Summary	iv
Résumé	vi
Resumen	ix
Introduction	1
I. Unpacking Civil Society and NGDOs	2
Civil society and the aid system	3
Differentiating NGDOs (within civil society and between NGDOs)	8
II. Stocktaking: What Do NGDOs Achieve in Social Development?	11
Expectations of NGDOs in social development	11
Setting expectations against achievements	13
III. Enhancing NGDOs as Agents of Social Development	20
Conditioning factors and the contexts of NGDO action	20
NGDO relations with communities	22
Partnership as pathology: Use, abuse and practical limits	25
NGDO relations with each other and with wider civil society	28
Interacting with government	32
NGDOs in the international arena	35
IV. Civil Society and Social Development: Changing the Rules of the Game	41
Repositioning aid—The case for development funds	42
Authentic partnership—A question of balancing rights and obligations	45
Involving an honest broker—The case for an Ombudsman	46
Preventing a development monoculture	47
Improving NGDO practice in social development	49
Expanding engagement with civil society beyond NGDOs	50
Perspectives on institutional reform	52
Bibliography	54
Figure
1. The Aid System — Highly Simplified Financial Links and Flows	4
Boxes
1. Expectations of NGDOs	12
2. Expectations of NGDOs Compared to Achievements	16