

Debating Development NGOs and the Future

Edited by Deborah Eade, with an introduction by Deborah Eade and Ernst Ligteringen

Leading representatives of NGOs, development think-tanks, and civil-society organisations, as well as scholars and activists, ask: • What kind of development will eradicate poverty, and what types of agency are best suited to the task? • What model of international co-operation can deliver social and economic justice? • What does this mean for NGOs in the future?

Development, NGOs, and Civil Society

Edited by Deborah Eade, with an introduction by Jenny Pearce

As public spending has declined, NGOs have secured a measure of financial security by taking on service-delivery. At the same time, they are a convenient channel through which official agencies can promote political pluralism. But can NGOs both facilitate governments' withdrawal from providing basic services for all and also claim to represent and speak for the poor and the disenfranchised? Jenny Pearce introduces papers that describe some of the tensions inherent in the roles being played by NGOs.

Beyond Civil Rights

Developing Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights in the United Kingdom

Sandy Ruxton and Razia Karim

Poverty and social exclusion are presented here as a denial of human rights, and economic, social, and cultural rights are seen as an essential foundation of citizenship. The authors examine the international and European frameworks for promoting and protecting such rights, and recommend methods which NGOs might employ to promote them.

Development and Advocacy

Edited by Deborah Eade, with an introduction by Maria Teresa Diokno-Pascual

'This publication offers an important contribution to the debate on the future of NGO advocacy work ... A special value of this book derives from the diversity of backgrounds and profiles of the authors, ensuring an interdisciplinary approach and a comprehensive analysis of this controversial topic.' Institute for International Relations journal, Culturelink

This book examines the involvement of major development NGOs in advocacy, and addresses questions of legitimacy, effectiveness, role, and strategy. As international grassroots advocacy is becoming more vocal, thanks to new communication technologies, what is the appropriate role for Northern NGOs?
