

reading

Education, Development, Citizenship

Education
Développement
Citoyenneté

This informative file published by "Solidarité Laïque" focuses on education for all and is primarily meant for teachers, educators and trainers.

It first refers to the notion of education described in article 26 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, before reviewing the history of education from its origins until modern times. Extensive statistical data complements the presentation.

The next part provides an overall view of past achievements and what remains to be done in the area. The file ends by providing information on concrete actions put into practice by various countries from different continents.

Contact: Solidarité Laïque, 22 rue Corvisart, 75019 Paris, France. Tel: (33) 1 45 35 13 13. Price: 100 FF.

Guide for International Human Rights Protection

Le guide
de la protection
internationale
des droits
de l'Homme

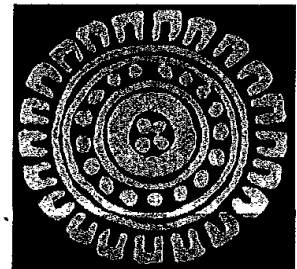

This guide is a practical reference tool enabling all those interested in human rights, as well as members of non-governmental organisations, lawyers, legal practitioners and particularly victims of rights violations, to discover or better understand the mechanisms of international human rights protection.

An updated version of this guide will be periodically available on the following website: www.ash.wagj.ensemble.

Contact: Editions La Pensée Sauvage, BP 141, 38002 Grenoble Cedex, France. Tel: (33) 4 76 42 09 37. Fax: (33) 4 76 42 09 32. E-mail: contact@penseesauvage.com. Price: 180 FF.

network

NODE

Based in Ireland, the NODE network is active in the area of development education, aiming to raise awareness of injustice, poverty and inequality at the local, regional, national and international levels.

The members' objectives include the sharing of information, development of knowledge and greater impact for activities, besides recognition of their role as practising educators working for social change.

The network's main reference is its magazine - NODE News.

This important source is published every two months and contains information on the activities of members and other organisations active in the same areas.

NODE also annually distributes an updated list of organisations that work in the area of development education in Ireland.

Contact: NODE, 10 Upper Camden St., Dublin, Ireland. Tel: (353) 1 475 19 98.

E-mail: office@nodenet.org. Website: www.nodenet.org.

ODIHR

The Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (ODIHR) is marking its 10th anniversary. A branch of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), the ODIHR is based in Warsaw (Poland) and has over the years become the European leader in the monitoring and control of election processes.

Contact: OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights, Aleja Ujazdowskie 19, 00-557 Warsaw, Poland. Tel: (48) 22 520 06 00. Fax: (48) 22 520 06 05. E-mail: office@odhr.osce.waw.pl. Website: www.osce.org/odhr/

surfing

<http://www.unesco.org/dialogue2001/>

This UNESCO site was set up in the context of the United Nations Year of Dialogue among Civilisations and presents numerous related activities aiming to promote such dialogue in the areas of education, society and culture.

Visitors to the site will find a wealth of information on intercultural dialogue. They are also invited to take part in debates and share ideas aiming to achieve a better understanding of different cultures.