United for Intercultural Action

European Network against
nationalism,
racism and
fascism and for the support of migrants and refugees

The UNITED network saw the light of day in 1992 in the context of the fight against racism, nationalism, fascism, discrimination and asylum policy. The UNITED network brings together more than 500 organisations from 49 European countries working together - united in the greater anti-racism network. They are actively engaged in the struggle against racism, fascism and nationalism, and support immigrants and refugees, besides jointly developing action plans that they then put into practice.

The sister organisations are able, through the network, to meet and co-operate on certain projects, establishing a working relationship within the framework of the UNITED network. UNITED launches European campaigns involving "action weeks", organises conferences aiming to enable the network's organisations to make concrete plans and discuss common strategies.

Every two months, UNITED publishes the "Internationalism Calendar", which contains details about the campaigns, including dates and contact information. In addition, the network publishes the annual "European Address Book Against Racism", containing the addresses of more than 1500 organisations active in this field. It also regularly distributes advertising materials produced by UNITED and associated organisations, such as posters or brochures designed to support the campaigns or fundraising activities.
